

Pathways to Four-Year Universities

On the path to a four-year college?
Let us help you get there.

Pathways to Four-Year Universities is a resource for California community college students who intend to transfer to UC Berkeley or another four-year institution.

Make sure you're on the right path by talking to a UC adviser in the transfer center or international student center at your community college.

About Pathways to Four-Year Universities

Through Pathways, advisers from UC Berkeley can help students develop a portfolio of classes that will pave the way to meeting transfer requirements. Advisers are also available throughout the admissions and transfer process to ensure that students receive the most accurate transfer information available.

In addition, students have access to over 800 summer courses through Berkeley Summer Sessions, where they can take key prerequisites or gateway courses. Pathways advisers can help students determine if these classes are right for them.

Community colleges in the Pathways program also have a unique financial aid agreement with Berkeley Summer Sessions that allows eligible US students to transfer any available federal financial aid to cover Summer Sessions classes.

Check in with your college's transfer center for more information.
